FARMERS MEET. SUDDEN DEATHS.

W. W. Rawson entertained at his Arlmade and the papers that have been who will deeply mourn his death. read at this convention have been especially instructive. Well, it was thi distinguished body of farmers who took the 9.17 train from North Union station, Boston, and made their way to Arlington. The delegates with their wives were met at our station by several barges. which conveyed them to Mr. Rawson's market gardens and to his farm a little way beyond. Mr. Rawson was upon his grounds to receive his several hundred guests and give them a cordial welcome. The company were much inway of growing his large variety of plants under the glass, and interested in his method and time of transplanting. Mr. Rawson had a thousand and one questions asked him, all of which he FREE! intelligently and promptly answered; for be it known Mr. Rawson understands his business from A to Z. After some time spent at the market gardens, the company took a good look at Mr. Rawson's farm. Subsequently the delegates were served with refreshments in the head house, furnished by our wellknown popular caterer, Hardy. Mr. Rawson, who has become authority the country through in all that pertains to horticulture and agriculture, well understands how to gracefully entertain the crowd. He seemed on Friday to give personal attention to each of his hundreds of guests. Ex-Gov. W. D. Hoard of Wisconsin is the president of this Farmers' National Congress. Arlington is surely distinguished in more ways than one.

It will be keenly alive to any improvement that shall add to the many natural and material attractions that already distinguish this locality." We also declared that, "while in our management anything. There is no reason why of this paper we shall be outspoken upon all questions of current interest, yet we shall at the same time trespass upon the rights of no individual." We further declared that "we are quite the clergyman have a bank account as aware that the weekly journal is not only to reflect public opinion, but in many instances it is to mould and educate it as class are paid in full for their services. well; and it will not so infrequently happen, as one might at first suppose, that it will at times find itself almost in direct opposition to the public sentiment. The weekly newspaper is not only to strike when the iron is hot, but it is to make the iron hot by striking. The public journal, in our estimation, is not always to study how it may keep itself in accord with the prevailing and popular notion concerning whatever department of life, neither is it to trim its sails so that it may float smoothly along in the political and religious world. The office work of a live, unflinching newspaper will more or less frequently be to create sentiment and public opinion, however thoroughly these creations may knock our pet theories in the head." #### EDITORIAL NOTES.

The race between the Shamrock and the Columbia was declared off on Tuesday. Cause-no wind.

Write it down that the first snow of the autumn months in the year of our Lord 1899 fell on Monday, Oct. 1st.

The proceedings of the recent International Council of Congregationalists are not escaping criticisms within and outside of the denomination.

Dewey's entrance into Washington on Monday evening was heralded by the acclaim of the waiting thousands. He was received at the White House by Secretary Long and President McKinley with a "welcome home again."

Capt. Carter was taken to Fort Leavenworth, Kansas, on Tuesday, to begin his five years' sentence to imprisonment. That Capt. Carter has been hold from their minister all substantial brought to justice is largely due to the New York World.

Still, we do not understand what she could have meant by the term "impossible" in the connection in which she used it. Who will tell us? The answer must be as blind to one as the reply to that Harvard question, some years ago, which read after this wise: "If an irresistible object should meet or collide with an immovable object, what would be the Admiral Dewey never loses his head. The modesty he displayed throughout that wonderful and more than magnificent demonstration made in his behalf in New York city, last week, has still more greatly endeared him to the American people. He did not for a moment forget through all the vociferous applause of the millions that he could not have destroyed the Spanish fleet had it not been for the aid of his brave captains-and so he said to the applauding multitudes. Admiral Dewey does not claim the earth, and yet he is one of the most deserving and popular men to be found on either side of the water. What a contrast between the modest admiral and the average politician! Name the politician if you can who in office does not proclaim upon the house top "I did it." Admiral Dewey has endeared himself to every American heart through his deeds of valor and through his unassuming manner. Whatever the American people have to give, Admiral Dewey can have by simply consenting to receive. He needn't as much as ask for it.

On last Sunday evening, seated comtime since we had seen the sun set that we had almost forgotten how charmingly a brilliantly illuminated sky seemed to one. The friend to whom we refer is a young man but a year or two married. He and his sensible wife have recently built them a pleasant home in one of the near suburbs of Boston. In building, this young couple made it a condition precedent that the site upon which they were to have their home should command a far-reaching vision of the eastern and western horizon, and as a result they have a home into which the early morning comes as a welcome guest, and where the evening delays in its approaches. In a word, these young people have started out in their married lives by appropriating to themselves the heavens above them and about them. of their home God's light. It was the May Queen who joyously exclaimed:

"Oh, see the sun begins to rise,
The heavens are in a glow;
He shines upon a hundred fields,
And all of them I know."

But many a one in Arlington is shut out from the sunrise and the sunset because he insists in singing in a senti

"Woodman, spare that tree!
Touch not a single bough
In youth it sheltered me,
And I'll protect it now."

Our young friend is a lawyer in Bos ton, who delights living in the country a half mile from the depot, that he and his "better half" may "under their own vine and fig tree" take in that magnificent western view.

We see by the New York World of Thursday's date that Ex-Gov. J. Q. A. Brackett of this town has signed, with many other distinguished men of the country, the World's petition to Presiis that immediately following fixing up dent McKinley to urge that the executive offer the friendly offices of the United States, under the provisions of the Peace Congress, to secure the peaceful settlement by arbitration of the impending war between Great Britain and the South African Republics (the Transvaal) and its allied republic, the Orange Free State.

It is to be hoped that Arlington at its approaching town meeting in November will appropriate a sufficient amount of money for the building a substantial school house in the Cutter district. The present building has not accommodations for the full number of children in the district, and beside the present house is not up to date. As we learn, it is the purpose of the school board to soon ask for such appropriation, and weeks, took his way to Westmoreland, further that it is the purpose of the N. H., where he enjoyed himseif for a town to soon erect such a school house. Now, why not make the appropriation at the November meeting, so as to have Tuesday. When he left Westmoreland the building completed by another authe ground had a respectable covering tumn at the latest? The district needs a new school house, and the teachers and pupils deserve it.

The Rev. Mr. Yeames received a telegram on Tuesday, the 3d, through Chief Yeoman Darley of U.S. warship Massachusetts, announcing the institution of the first Naval Lodge of Good Templars sell; treasurer, Warren L. Russell; in the United States Navy, on board the Castine, now on service at the Philippines. There are one hundred floating lodges on board the warships of the British navy. The influence of the order has been most beneficial to the man-of-war's man, and the "jackies" in their turn, have proved most enthusiastic and successful missionaries of temperance throughout the fleet and at the ports where they have touched. It will not be wondered at that the officers and highest authorities in the navy warmly favor the work of the Good Templars.

> Mr. S. P. Prentiss, who has but just returned from his visit of a week to New York, gave us on Thursday a pleasant and vivid account of the naval parade in honor of Admiral Dewey. Mr. Prentiss was a guest of the Associated Press, so he had a comfortable seat on its boat, and thus took in the entire parade. Mr. Prentiss had a full and unobstructed sight of Admiral Dewey, and he affirms what the newspaper world has so unanimously declared, that Admiral Dewey bears himself, however demonstrative his surroundings, with becoming modesty. Mr. Prentiss says that the arch is a wonderful specimen of artistic work. Flags floated from every business house on Broadway, and Dewey's face was to be seen in every window. Mr. Prentiss not fear that we interrupt the regular exercises of the schools under their charge by our frequent calls therein. In the first place, we stop but for a moto the teachers, and look into the bright, cheerful faces of the children. It takes one who has himself been 25 years in the public schools as teacher and superintendent but the briefest while to very accurately judge of the condition of the school he visits. And so it is that we speak intelligently of morning that we called at the office of Supt. Sutcliffe, who gave us a cordial "good morning" and a cheerful welcome to the several departments in the Russell school building. We made a flying visit to each room, the teachers all the while going on with their regular work. In each room we were pleasantly impressed with the abounding good nature of both teachers and pupils. The whole spirit of the several departments seemed to be "take and give," the pupils being in a receptive cononly a willingness but a love in imparting the instruction which is theirs to give. The superintendent and teachers are working as a unit in order that they may do the best in promoting the educational interests of Arlington. Edwin McIntosh, the young man to whom we refer, came some few years ago from Nova Scotia, and until recently has been employed as a gateman at the Lake street station, where he performed his duties faithfully and well. But, anxious for an education, he saved money enough for several terms in school, and so it is that he applied to Supt. Sutcliffe for admission to the Russell school. Mr. Sutcliffe readily admitted him, and now the young man with the beginners is doing a work which is a credit to himself and the school alike. When the boy or girl thirsts for knowledge, then is learning made easy. Arlington has every reason to feel proud of her public schools. Let us see that every possible aid is given them that they may achieve still better

ROBBINS SPRING HOTEL.

To look out from Robbins Spring Hotel, as we did on Thursday morning, and take in that far-reaching stretch of autumn tint and color, is a whole revelation and gospel in itself; for in whatever direction the eye is turned one sees a panorama that is seldom equalled and still more seldom surpassed. That man or woman who does not fall in love with these autumn days is to be pitied. Now is the ripened season when one feels like proposing to all nature, feeling sure she would say "yes" now that Mill Street Shoeing Forge, she is in her softer and kindlier moods. We can well understand how the guests at Robbins Spring Hotel are now revelling in sentiment and poetry. And yet they find time to interest themselves in golf, tennis, bowling and the fascil H. L. Frost & Co. 95 Union and 166 Blackstone St yet they find time to interest themselves nating hop. Indeed, in all these amusements there is not a little of the poetical idea. On Sunday evening came the sacred concert which is always enjoyed, and particularly so, as the music rendered is that which has in it the melody and harmony of the olden time. On Monday golf was the leading amusement, while in the evening it was bowling. On Wednesday evening the hop was enjoyed by the large number upon the floor. Williams' orchestra rendered the music. This hop was the last of the season of the free dances at the hotel. The proprietor of the hotel and the Messrs. Atwood deserve from the public a hearty vote of thanks for the pleasure and amusement they have afforded our Arlington public as well as their many guests through the entertainments they have given without cost to those who have enjoyed these social functions. Now the house has arranged for a series of dances of a more private character at each of these from 10 couple, $1.00, including refreshments. Tickets limited. These dances will prove themselves brilliant events. Arrivals at the hotel for the past week are and wife, R. H. Rines, Mrs. H. G. Gately and family-all of Boston: Horace B. Howlett, Cambridge; Erizabeth H. Frost, Belmont: John L. Roscoe. Waverly; Anna W. Webber, Philadelphia. Ex Gov. and Mrs. Brackett, with Mr. Gaylord Brackett and Beatrice Brackett, dined at the hotel on Sunday. It is your fault if you miss these golden days at the hotel; for free of cost you may view from its inviting verandas such a picturesque landscape scene that defies the brush and the pencil, however soft their touches.

We reproduce below the bill of fare that Plymouth served the clergymen in 620, and the dinner served to the delegates of the International Council of Congregationalists on Tuesday, Sept. 29th, 279 years after the first date. > Edible Birds' Nests. The nests of the little swift (a kind of swallow) gathered along the rocky cliffs with so much difficulty and yet in such quantities on account of the Chinese demand, are formed of a salivary secretion which soon becomes firm on exposure to the air. It is a glutinous white substance with little red dots. They are clean, the nests being taken as soon as completed. The little swift, being repeatedly robbed, is at last compelled to eke out its waning supply of secretion with little sticks and grass and is thus enabled to lay its eggs and hatch its young, as only nests free from foreign material are merchantable.—"A Sketch of the PhilThe Frog and the Judge.

"I had been living alongside of Silver lake for 15 years," said the judge, "before I concluded to go fishing. I suppose I had seen five carloads of fish taken out of the lake during those catch when I got around to it. One late the ladies upon the splendid result day I got out hook and line and set off in my boat. It was right after dinber, and I let the boat go drifting. The hook was baited with a frog for bass, of course I waited for a bite.

"And you got one?" queried the man witht the new patent reel.

"I can't say that I did," replied the judge. "No, I have never been able to satisfy myself that I did." "But what did you do?"

"Just fleated around for five hours. I think I was busy most of the time preparing a case to come off the next week, but had a bass taken hold of that frog I must have felt it." "But didn't you pull in your line at Bounced the Bill of Fare. Stories of the generosity of Judge Poland of Vermont are constantly coming to light. One of the prettiest is about an old farmer, whom the judge invited to dine with him one day at the hotel in Lyndon, Vt.

The old man's shabby garments and uncouth manners did not prevent his host from being heartily glad to see him, and he was ushered into the dining room with all the deference that could have been shown the judge's

The Women's Foreign Missionary most distinguished friend. It was the farmer's first experience at a hotel, and when the waiter laid the menu card before him he asked quickly, "What's that?" "The bill of fare, sir," replied the waiter.

"Take it away!" said the old man, with a look of triumph on his brown face. "Judge Poland isn't the sort that invites folks and then lets 'em pay their own bills. I've known him, boy and man, young feller! Perhaps you didn't know I'm a-vis'ting Judge Poland today."

The waiter bowed with the aspect of a graven image, but the judge and his guest smiled at each other in mutual friendliness and pleasure, and then the judge proceeded to order for two .-Youth's Companion.

The Missionary's Little Joke.

A native Maori chieftain, the descendant of cannibal kings, is now completing his medical education in Chicago. Cannibalism ended in his tribe, he says, when Bishop Selwyn converted his grandfather, but he tells some stories of it which have a distinctly humorous flavor. For instance: It is said that once a chief captured a toothsome morsel, as he was old and thin and looked as if his flesh would be tough. The missionary warned the dinner and, pulling up his trousers, cut a slice off the calf of his leg and offered it to the chief. The chief tasted it, said he didn't like it and passed it to a subchief: The sub tasted it, made a wry face and passed it on. The next man who took a bite of it spat it out. The missionary was released. After he had gone it was discovered that he wore a cork leg.
